Taking care of yourself after you terminate a pregnancy

Post termination medical check-ups in Well Woman

If you terminate your pregnancy, Well Woman recommends that you come to us for a medical check-up about three weeks after the termination. The check up has three elements:

Confirming the pregnancy has ended:

Firstly, we will confirm that the pregnancy has been terminated – most women will be able to make a clear distinction between the 'before' and 'after' symptoms. Nausea and breast tenderness tend to disappear within a day or two of the termination. Pregnancy tests are not helpful because they can often show positive for several weeks after the pregnancy has ended.

Very occasionally there may be some doubt as to whether or not the pregnancy is continuing. In that case, we will refer you for an ultrasound scan.

Bleeding pattern:

Secondly, we will confirm that the bleeding pattern after the termination is within normal limits, and that there is no evidence of infection. Bleeding after a termination can vary between being very light and being so heavy that you may pass blood clots. Heavy bleeding usually settles after a few days but light bleeding or "spotting" may continue for several weeks. Crampy period pain may happen for the first few days after a termination.

If an infection is present, the pain and bleeding do not settle. Most clinics in the UK prescribe antibiotics for one week after the termination, but sometimes a different antibiotic may be needed. We can prescribe this at the post termination check.

Contraception:

Thirdly, we will discuss with you your future contraceptive needs.

Our doctor or nurse will take a short medical history – previous illnesses, allergies, medication, recent antibiotics taken. We will check your blood pressure, and possibly check your abdomen to make sure there is no tenderness. Internal examinations are not necessary unless bleeding is very heavy. A cervical smear test is not usually done for at least a few months after a termination.

Post-termination counselling in Well Woman

Every woman who has experienced a termination will have different emotions.

It is possible to feel relief, anger, guilt or sadness. The climate of silence in Ireland around the subject of termination may cause you to experience feelings of isolation and rejection.

In Well Woman we find that some women will be very clear they made the correct decision, some may regret the experience, while others struggle on alone hoping the feelings will go away.

Termination is not a simple matter of "right" or "wrong" and it is important to be able to talk openly about your feelings, as well as having appropriate support to work through any emotional pain or distress.

It is possible to take a very positive attitude to all that has happened, and gain personal insight.

If you have had a termination and would like to discuss your feelings – whether immediately afterwards or several years on - Well Woman offers sessions with highly trained professional counsellors in a confidential and supportive environment.

Medical check-ups after a termination, as well as post-termination counselling, are available to you free of charge in Well Woman. We acknowledge the support of the Crisis Pregnancy Agency in providing these services.
